Dear Dr. Balint,

I should not change the title because it has always since been called the Congress. Thank you for the reference to the official report which I had myself discovered.

As you know, I think we had better abide by the Committee's decision. They will no doubt consider the question of a second volume when they see how the first one has been received. I am sure it would be preferable for you to make the selection of your Papers yourself.

Yours very sincerely

Dear Dr. Jones,

Enclosed I am sending you the list of Ferenczi’s papers which were not included either in the Contributions or Further Contributions. I have omitted from the list: a) all papers which have only local, Hungarian, interest, such as Obituary of Dr. M. Schaechter, or Ignotus, etc. b) Practically all book reviews apart from those on Freud’s books; although some of them, e.g. that on Brodbeck’s books might be quite interesting, c) his two general reviews in the “Berichte”.

The question is now should we aim at as complete an edition as possible, in which case Thalassa and some of the book reviews should be included, or at publishing a kind of “selected papers”. May I have your opinion about it.

I consider very carefully your proposition to publish only one volume of my papers. I find that I can easily cut the volume down by about ten percent which would make it quite a possible one. Any further cut is likely to break up the continuity and would make any subsequent publication rather awkward, almost nonsensical.

To clarify the situation will you allow me to point out that it is not a publisher that I am looking for. Several firms, both in the States and here have asked me for this manuscript (e.g. Routledge and Kegan Paul, International Universities Press, etc.) but I would prefer very much to have my book included in the Library. For this honour I am quite prepared to sacrifice some of my papers within limit. Knowing the members of the Publication Committee, I am quite certain that, if you agree to my proposition, they will not raise any objection.

Looking forward to your coming address,

Yours sincerely,
